DOLLARS AND SENSE BY DAVID WELLS

Some Costly Myths of Share Market Investing

There are many self-perpetuating myths about investing in the share market and these, over the years, have become accepted as the truth. Even within the industry this is the case and this means that investors don't make the best of what is arguably the best and most reliable place to invest over the long term.

The biggest myth is the term "Blue Chip" to describe the best of the best. For a start, the term Blue Chip derives from the highest value chips in poker games, so in reality it should mean the biggest gamble. In investing it is now used to describe a good company, ergo a good investment. This however is based on the size and reputation of said company, not necessarily on its performance. Investing in "Blue Chip" companies solely on reputation is not the best approach. Between February 2006 and February 2016 the top 10 blue chips (ASX 10 Index) returned zero growth. Given that CSL made over 1900 percent in the same time, the other nine companies would have been expensive investments were they bought and held for those year. Merely accepting that because a company is well known, big and pays dividends that it is a good investment is one of the most naïve decision an investor can make.

Another myth is that the big banks are good investments and always have been. I have found that the dogmatic belief in this is one of the biggest factors in the average investor not only missing out on making money, but actually losing quite a lot over the years. In looking at absolute returns (growth plus dividends) the big banks have been better than market average about six years in the last twenty, and share prices have been totally correlated with the level of dividends. In the last six years the total return has seen a decline of 35.6% including the very positive value of reinvesting dividends. National Bank passed $30 for the first time in 2001 and closed the year at $30.28. Since then it has lost money in 12 of the subsequent 18 full years and is now $18.67. Apart from CBA the other banks have fared similarly. The CBA has performed better, but not greatly. The big factor is that the share price reflected the level of dividends and ever increasing payout ratios. This is not sustainable in the longer term and we are now seeing that play out. Those of us with long memories can remember that in 1993 the ANZ could not issue more shares without making them partly paid initially, and Westpac almost went broke. No, banks are not always good investments.

Moving on, a third myth is that BHP (and RIO et al) is a great investment and worth keeping for ever. The truth is that all our resource companies, of which BHP and RIO are the two biggest (and BHP the biggest in the world) are price takers, not price makers and resources are a cyclical investment. Prices go up and down with the economic cycle. The BHP price will reflect the value of commodity prices, not the intrinsic value of the company and it will go up and down accordingly. From $45 in 2008 to $14 in 2016 and back to $35 for example. Is that a good investment?

Only if you sold at a high price and bought back at a low price. Yes, BHP and RIO are great businesses but there are times when you want them and times when you don't. An investor may hold some of the company shares continuously but the only long term reliable method to make money from resource shares is to buy low and sell high. And NEVER buy resource shares solely for dividends. When things go bad which they will, you can be sure the dividends will stop. There are many more myths (such as "You haven't lost money until you sell the share") that people and advisers relate as the truth. Investors need to be able to distinguish reality from what it is they would like to believe is the truth, and that is very difficult. We all have inbuilt biases and these flavour our perceptions. And our perceptions are our truths.

An investor and an adviser must both look at the reality, however ugly that may seem, even develop a small degree of scepticism. Any investment is only good to the extent it will give you what you want in the future. What it did yesterday has gone, and is only valuable as a guide. Many investments are like shooting stars – flitting across our skies but fading soon after. Some are far from exciting and never make much noise, but keep on achieving. Have you heard of Washington Soul Pattinson? This is the second longest listed business of the Australian Stock Exchange after BHP and has not reduced its dividend in more than 40 years, one of only two companies to achieve that.

Being objective is difficult but is essential in making buy/sell decisions. Reputation is one thing, but it's performance that will achieve your ends, and they are definitely not one the and the same.

A classic crime story from our esteemed crime writer,
Leon Herbert

I SPY WITH MY LITTLE EYE

The man in the dock was silent for what cannot have been more than a second, even though it seemed an eternity. Then, in the precise grammatical language of a person who has reached fluency in an adopted tongue after years of training and study, he quietly made his statement.

"My Lord," he said gently, "I have committed crimes for which I am charged and I expect sentence. I have also committed other crimes which are not crimes in the eyes of the law-crimes against my friends. When I asked my counsel to put certain facts before you, I did not do it because I wanted to lighten my sentence. I did it in order to atone for those other crimes. I also want to thank the Governor and the staff of the prison for the considerate treatment they have given me".

Those were the last words spoken in public by Emil Klaus Fuchs, without doubt the greatest political criminal in history, for he altered the international scene, founded a new situation in the eternal war for power, and caused consternation in the chancelleries of a score of capitals. He had created a world crisis with a dozen words spoken to a British security agent one afternoon in January 1950.

"I have told the Russians the method of making the atomic bomb," he confessed.

Never before have the world's eyes been focused on an Old Bailey Court with such intensity as on March 1, 1950. They were watching the ancient precepts of British justice grapple with this new evil of twenty-century disquiet.

The Lord Chief Justice, Lord Goddard, heard the case. His scarlet and ermine garb, virtually identical with that of his predecessors in centuries past, the medieval pageantry of mace and sword-bearers, the quaint yet momentous legal phraseology which opened the proceedings contrasting strangely with the bizarre world and modern science and the terrifying forces of ideology which had brought Emil Klaus Fuchs to Court.

Leroy, Phillip Island's resident sleuth, was regaling his copper mate Inspector Flint and other mates, while observing social distancing - Flint, who loved spy stories, particularly in movies featuring Matt Damon or Daniel Craig, would not have been excited or even interested to listen to the retired barrister account of the trial of a famous spy in the "old days", but his more mature audience of close friends enjoying a light lunch in a cafe on idyllic Phillip Island sat enthralled as their memories cast back to those days, when, as the author John Le Carre might have put it, "men were men but spies were special", and not least the significance of the atomic bomb and the horrific consequences of its deployment.

The trial lasted a mere ninety minutes. Legally it was a simple case. There was only one witness. Neither prosecution nor defence felt the need for histrionics. The Judge's summing up was masterly, but the very fact that Fuchs had pleaded guilty stripped much of the need for dramatic displays of oratory by counsel. Yet, Leroy stressed, the case would remain in the pages of history long after the murderers, gangsters and the ordinary run of professional crooks had been forgotten.

Fuchs had the appearance of a man whose soul was already dead within him. Such utter mental desolation was seldom seen as in the remote, faraway light of his eyes. His face was pale, but not unnaturally so. His mouth, immobile and rigid, was that of a kindly and sensitive man. No one could avoid being impressed by his splendid forehead- the sort of skull that would have delighted a Rodin. Some journalists referred to him as a second Einstein and opined that the misguided scientist was one of humanity's greatest brains and his current appearance the result of a belated conscience.

Fuchs was born in Germany. When Hitler came to power he fled to France. Tragedy beset his family, and his father was arrested by the Gestapo. In the autumn of 1933 he arrived penniless and in utter despair in England. He survived however to become a brilliant student and very personable and in 1941 was invited to help with intricate mathematical problems undertaken at Birmingham University- there he signed the Official Secrets Act and started on work connected to the atomic bomb which led to him travelling extensively. He believed Russia to be a gallant ally of his adopted country and was committed to that country's ideology- he became determined to help her- it was not long before he was noticed and conscripted by the Russian Intelligence Agency who were not slow to appreciate his value and allegiance to the Soviet expansionary plans. And so Fuchs, acting out of New York, England and also Sante Fe, where tests were carried out, met covertly from time to time with Russian agents to hand over information and to deliver the formula for the world's deadliest bomb.

As Russia was Britain's fighting ally when Fuch's began his activities he could not be hanged; the maximum penalty was fourteen years, which was what he received. A brilliant mind and for a time a brilliant spy who just lost the plot!

Hopefully readers of the Vibe will enjoy this true story and condone its replacement of my customary whodunit". Leon.

Healthy and Healing with Pip

I'm SO angry right now! I could spit fire!!

This month I'd like to talk about strong emotions, we all have them.

Particularly now, with this worldwide situation that's at hand.

The question I have is, how can we use our strong emotions to be more healthy, productive and happy?

When I was working on board ships there were situations that really burned me up.

I would get so angry about the food not being very healthy; or the immigration process being so long and drawn out for the crew; or the passengers not doing what we asked them to do during boat drill.

It all seems silly now, I mean, who cares if the passengers don't want to put their life jacket on?

Why can't they eat a slice of pizza and drink their cocktail, while I tell them the safety instructions? The ship probably won't sink this cruise. Right? (read more in my book: Finding my Soul at Sea). Right now there are LOTS of strong emotions being expressed within our families, within our communities and in the world.

Anger. Frustration. Fear. Anxiety.

Strong emotion ... what does it mean?

Well, essentially it means THIS matters to me! It means I care about this person, job, situation or relationship A LOT.

I'd like to offer a suggestion, based on the teachings of Abraham Hicks.

Together let's practice revelling in the positive AND the negative emotions.

The idea is to REALLY sink in and feel both.

Squashing the negative emotions only makes it worse. Right?

The more you try to stop being angry or afraid the more you feel.

So, why not practice 'milking the juice' from ALL of our emotions.

Abraham Hicks suggests that we practice sitting with and rolling around in our strong emotions. When you feel angry, sad, anxious, or fearful try to take a moment (a small step back) and say:

"ohhhhhhh I'm soooo angry right now I'm soooooo aaaaarrghhh ... I could spit fire! I feel like I might burst!! I really, really, really feel (name your emotion)"

NAME it ... SPEAK it ... HONOUR it.

And your inner being will say "Ohhhhh this is gonna get good ..."

When there is conscious awareness of your emotions (and therefore your desire), you can use it as a springboard to shift forward.

When we feel strongly about something it means there is A LOT of momentum behind it.

And there's no point trying to stop a car once it's off the cliff. It's best to just ride with it. It'll be over soon. No point in chastising yourself either.

"You'll have an opportunity to start again real soon." Abraham Hicks jokes.

The point is once you get going on a negative story, the best way to get through it quickly is to allow rather than resist it.

So, first, allow it, sit with it, accept and see if you can enjoy rather than resist.

Second, go and have a nap, or distract, and soothe yourself to lessen the resistance.

Importantly, (and this might seem odd for a Psychologist, Counsellor, Healer to say) please ... DON'T talk to someone else about it. You will only get confirmation and agreement of your negative vibes and keep it in your heart. DON'T beat the drum of bad.

Third, during your normal day do deliberate feel good activities like meditation, laughing, walking on the beach, watching sunsets and sunrises, sitting in the grass and cultivate a dominant feeling of well-being.

Please DO go to see a Psychologist, Counsellor or Healer to help you with step 1 and 3. To practice letting go and feeling good. Get tools and skills and strategies, to stay healthy, connected and well. NOT using them to justify your life's dis-ease.

Then when you have resistance or a situation come up, that doesn't feel good, you know how to reset yourself back on course. Your negative emotion is a gift from the Universe. It tells you there is some tweaking to do in your vibration to move forward. Your vibrational world improves when you have a fit of negative emotion.

Are you ready to move towards your desires or will you continue to stand in justification of not having what you want?

Blessings Pip xxx

Did you experience this phenomenon during the lockdown?

Well you would have to agree that the first part of 2020 was not what anybody expected the year to be.

The imposed Covid 19 lockdown has forced us to alter our behaviors in many ways not only with social distancing and hygiene but the adoption of using new online technologies like Skype and Zoom to stay in touch with friends and family and for some, the workplace.

The lockdown not only wreaked havoc on the economy but also on people's emotions. We are by nature, social beings and this separation not only gave you time to reflect, but makes you aware of the importance we do place on community, even at a subconscious level.

I noticed this myself when I went out walking around my neighborhood, people you would come across on the footpath would move to one side, careful not to infringe on the 1.5metre social distancing requirements, but at the same time you could feel a warmth or connection in a smile that would be exchanged enforcing the idea that, yes, we ARE all in this together.

And other people I have spoken to have also experienced a coming together in the sense of community in the aftermath of the lockdown.

This sense of community has brought people back to "local" even when purchasing goods and services online, which on reflection seems to be a contradiction because when you hear the word "online" you immediately think of the World Wide Web.

But what it really means is businesses that show they have an understanding of the community that they are serving, are rewarded by that community.

If you have been listening to the radio you would have heard the numerous commercials by businesses jumping on the remote servicing bandwagon to take advantage of peoples dependence of having to resort to buying goods and services online but without the proof that they are truly active within the community, it may just become more commercial background noise.

However there is one legal firm that has operated with regional communities in mind, and servicing them remotely for some time now.

It was in 2006, that James McConvill & Associates took the decision to ditch the big inner city fancy offices, in favor of really reaching out to communities in regional areas who they thought had been forgotten, when it came to providing expert legal advice with a local understanding of their community.

This meant that now all regional areas around Victoria could benefit from the wealth of experience that their lawyers have gained over time.

It has given them a thorough understanding of the type of legal problems that people in regional areas face and how they can apply the legal strategies they have in their arsenal to really help people in these communities.

And being one of the very first legal firms to service clients remotely all over Victoria has enabled James McConvill & Associates to become the leaders in this method of providing legal advice throughout the Phillip Island and San Remo area, putting them at the forefront of remote legal servicing.

Through the use of technology, over the past 14 years they have developed reliable and proven systems of remote servicing within the legal field.

The use of these systems have enabled James McConvill & Associates to provide their clients cost effective legal services covering the many areas such as: Criminal Law, General Family Law, Parenting Rights, Separation, Property Rights, and Business Law.

So if you need legal advice and you want a firm that fully understands the challenges that regional communities face, you can always turn to James McConvill & Associates. You can contact them on 0400 138 768

Winter tyre safety

Correct tyre care, maintenance and selection can greatly enhance your safety on the road this winter.

Make sure your tyres have adequate tread depth to keep you safe and legal.

Ensure your tyres are properly inflated and checked at least once a month and before any long journeys.

Check the condition of your tyres by looking for any lumps, bulges or cracks and remove any objects embedded in the tread.

When checking the tread, pressures and condition, don't forget the spare.

Consider fitting winter weather tyres for the whole winter period. At temperatures below 7 degrees they provide much better safety and grip.

Remove wheels or jack the weight off any vehicles' tyres that will not be used over the winter months such as caravans, horse-floats or motorcycles

Visit your local tyre dealer for a tyre safety check.

Winter driving tips

Winter driving: Extreme weather and poor light can make driving dangerous in the winter months. Make sure you adjust the way you drive by following these steps. Maintain a safe distance to the car in front, it takes twice as much distance to stop in the rain.

Turn headlights on: In fog or snowy conditions, use fog lights instead of setting your headlights on high beam. Avoid large puddles. Avoid unnecessary travel in heavy rain. Driving in snowy conditions requires a lot of concentration and patience. Stay calm if you're stuck in a long queue and always follow road signs and directions given.

Before you take off: Check road conditions by visiting Vic Traffic or downloading the Vic Traffic app. Make sure your car battery is in good condition and that the air conditioning system is working properly. Anti-freeze is recommended in your radiator. Pack your sunglasses if you're heading to the snow.

As you drive: Drive cautiously with two hands on the wheel and steady pressure on the accelerator. Brake with steady pressure. Avoid braking when cornering. Fit chains to your tyres when advised or if the road looks icy. Engage low gear when you drive down a mountain. If you hit ice, remain calm and apply the brakes gently to slowly regain traction. At night, only use low beam lights. High beams do not work in high mist areas. If you can't see, pull over, put on your hazard lights and keep your engine running.

SAFETY CHECK BEFORE

Parking: Leave the car in gear with front wheels turned away from slopes. Reverse into a car park or make sure you can drive out forward. Poor vision makes reversing out of car parks dangerous.

Black ice: You cannot see black ice. It generally forms at night, in the early mornings or on sections of the roads that haven't been exposed to sunlight, like under tree cover. Take the following steps to minimise risk:

1. Check for black ice warnings by visiting Vic Traffic or downloading the Vic Traffic app.
2. Delay your trip if you can to avoid icy conditions. If you have to drive, allow plenty of time. If possible, use a car equipped with Electronic Stability Control (ESC). Braking takes longer in icy conditions so always allow for plenty of room between you and the car in front. Slow down and be patient.
3. If you hit black ice, you will have little or no control over your vehicle.
4. Until you clear the patch of ice, use the accelerator, brakes and steering as little as possible.

Landscape design and construction tips

By Rob Waddell from

WADDELL
LANDSCAPE DESIGN & CONSTRUCTION

Design tip:

When designing a new garden or making alterations to your existing garden, always think about creating consistency in your plant selection. An easy trap to fall into is to go to your local plant supplier or hardware store and pick out a bunch of random plants that take your fancy while strolling through the nursery section. Without a proper theme to your garden and plant selection you will invariably end up with a hotch potch selection of plants that don't belong or grow well together and the result will be a messy and unorganised garden. For example, Yukka's and Hydrangeas typically do not mix well while Magnolias and Gardenias compliment each other nicely. The same can be said for hedges; achieving a consistent look by repeating the same tree variety in a hedge compared to using a handful of different trees that all merge together with different colours, textures, heights and rate of growth which ends up giving you a focal point in your garden for all the wrong reasons! If your goal is to achieve a very natural and free flowing garden, then look at incorporating curves and grasses while utilising the natural contours of the land. If that's your theme, stick to your theme. The same can be said for contemporary, coastal, modern, native and formal garden styles - each has its own appeal but can be thrown out by the inclusion of a rogue species. Keep it consistent! If you don't know much about plants or planting styles, find a hardy and easy to grow variety such as Lomandra or Arthropodium and plant them en masse. This is a really effective way to achieve a beautiful looking garden without the extensive plant knowledge of a professional landscape designer.

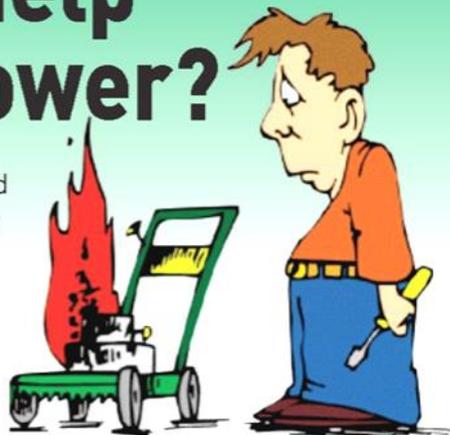

Gardening tip:

If you've been waiting for the best time to transplant some trees or shrubs in your garden, now is the time! Winter means most plant varieties aren't trying to produce flowers or vigorous growth so the plant's energy can focus on adapting to its new home. When transplanting, remember to protect the root ball as much as possible. This means when digging your plant, try to keep the roots intact and retain as much original soil as you can. Also be realistic with the size of the plant or tree you intend to transplant, larger trees are very heavy and with the added weight of soil and large roots the task can be quite onerous and even dangerous! When assessing your plant to be relocated, remember a younger plant is much more receptive to being moved than a mature plant that's been in the same location for many years. For the best chance of survival, be sure to dig your new hole twice the size of the root ball, add fresh soil, a layer of mulch and water in well. Repeat watering will also help keep the roots moist which is especially important over the first few weeks while the plant establishes. If you're having doubts about the existing health of your plant or tree, remember it is sometimes a much better option to buy a new, healthy and happy plant that will thrive in your intended location instead of starting off sick and continuing to be lacklustre for the remainder of its life in your garden.

Untamed: Stop Pleasing, Start Living

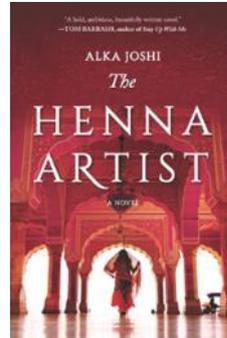

By Glennon Doyle

RRP $35.00

For many years, Glennon Doyle denied her discontent. Then, while speaking at a conference, she looked at a woman across the room and fell instantly in love. Three words flooded her mind- There. She. Is. At first, Glennon assumed these words came to her from on high but soon she realised they had come to her from within.

This was the voice she had buried beneath decades of numbing addictions and social conditioning. Glennon decided to let go of the world's expectations of her and reclaim her true untamed self. Soulful and uproarious, forceful and tender, Untamed is both an intimate memoir and a galvanising wake-up call. It is the story of how one woman learned that a responsible mother is not one who slowly dies for her children, but one who shows them how to fully live. It is also the story of how each of us can begin to trust ourselves enough to set boundaries, make peace with our bodies, honour our anger and heartbreak, and unleash our truest, wildest instincts.

Untamed shows us how to be brave. And, as Glennon insists, 'The braver we are, the luckier we get.'

The Henna Artist

By Alka Joshi

RRP $29.99

Escaping from an abusive marriage, seventeen-year-old Lakshmi makes her way alone to the vibrant 1950s pink city of Jaipur. There she becomes the most highly requested henna artist-and confidante-to the wealthy women of the upper class. But trusted with the secrets of the wealthy, she can never reveal her own.

Known for her original designs and sage advice, Lakshmi must tread carefully to avoid the jealous gossips who could ruin her reputation and her livelihood. As she pursues her dream of an independent life, she is startled one day when she is confronted by her husband, who has tracked her down these many years later with a high-spirited young girl in tow-a sister Lakshmi never knew she had.

Suddenly the caution that she has carefully cultivated as protection is threatened. Still she perseveres, applying her talents and lifting up those that surround her as she does.

COMPOSITION IN PHOTOGRAPHY – LAYERS

Every type of photography can be impacted by using Layering. Layering gives our two dimensional image a three dimensional feel and makes them come alive.

When we take a photo we are capturing a three dimensional world on a flat two dimensional piece of paper. To create the three dimensional effect in a two dimensional image it helps to include layers in your composition. Putting your subject between layers immediately gives the feeling of three dimensional. It also allows the viewer to feel they're part of the scene.

Layers help to tell a story

To create a photojournalistic image is to create a story at a glance. This takes awareness of surrounding elements to combine them into one compelling composition. Knowing and using compositional tools will instantly improve your photography.

There are different ways of incorporating layers into your photography. Four examples are with objects, with movement, with scenes within scenes and with people.

In documentary style, when photographing people look for vegetation to include in front to give a sense of place.

Incorporating movement into your image tells a story of what is happening and what will follow.

Remember When by Rhonda Buitenhuis (Using layers of people and vegetation to give a three dimensional feeling).

By changing position and perhaps pulling back, you might see a scene within a scene. Using people as layers in composition is just as effective as using inanimate objects. It just takes the right combination of people to tell the story.

So next time you're out taking photos, remember to add the compositional rule of Layering to help make your images stand out.

Fishy Tales with Craig Edmonds from Jim's Bait and Tackle

The uncertainty of the year continued through June with not only the fishing but with everything. The hospitality industry was just about to welcome back a worthwhile amount of people and at the last minute had the rug pulled and are now back to hardly meeting the bills with difficult times to come. It is the same for every business on the island with uncertainty around what the up-coming tourist season will look like as we get closer to spring which makes planning very difficult. It's a different time for all and many retail businesses like ours actually do all our seasons stock ordering through this winter period. The problem this year is most suppliers have no idea what or how much stock they are actually going to be able to get. So like many, our ordering will be postponed and a little different with the possibility of stock shortages later in the season. So next time you go to a shop that is low on stock there is a real possibility that there is nothing they can do about it at the moment. I have had several comments from customers about being told, when going out to eat somewhere that they were given a time to be out by. Don't forget this is nothing to do with them not wanting your patronage, but more about trying to be open and survive with the restricted numbers.

Probably shouldn't mention it but, the weather through June has been almost perfect with more days of light winds and sunshine than a typical winter. It is a bit on the cool side and the time of the year for gentlemen's hours fishing but well worth the effort to be out in the sunshine. The surprising part is that most places have already had their average yearly rainfall with some of our wettest months to still come. We are already past the shortest day, one month of winter down so lets hope the sunshine and calm conditions continue all the way to Christmas and beyond.

A lot of the fishing turns to land based at this time of the year with boats packed up for the cooler months. We have seen that over the last couple of weeks with plenty standing on the surf beaches, especially on those days of light winds and sun. The fishing reports have been mixed and we have had just as many reports of whale sightings from those fishing. The salmon sizes are a little on the smaller side and the average is around 500 grams with the odd 1kg or better showing up. Reports have come from all surf beaches, on the island and off, the best beach has been the beach with the least amount of weed on the day. We did get a couple of reports from the rocks at Kilcunda of flat-head and small pinkies with one just size gummy.

Calamari reports have continued to be all over the place and hard to get a read on the best time or spot to go to catch them. We have seen several good catches and quality calamari but it's just the consistency that hasn't been there, land or boat. All of the usual spots from the land or from the boats has produced them and I suggest just head to where you would usually go and be patient. It has been a mixture of baited and artificial jigs that has been working and often people will have both out at the same time.

Pinkies must be in the millions in the bay with those fishing mid-June reporting that no matter where they went all they could catch was small pinkies. Most told us that it was difficult to get a bigger bait down or to fish for anything else. You had to do a lot of travelling to find that corner where the pinkies weren't. There were plenty of yakkas, couta and pike showing up for those who don't mind eating them or were out chasing some fresh baits for the freezer. Any bigger fish, gummies or bigger pinkies/snapper that were reported came from after the sun went down which seemed to be after the pinkies bed time.

Whiting were challenging but once you worked them out the quality was well worth the effort of searching and time. They weren't the longest we have seen or the biggest bag fulls of them but the quality of whiting with their thicker fat layer makes them one of the best table fish for this time of the year. Bit like the calamari, no spots really stand out and just pick your favourite and work around that area.

HELP A LOCAL IF YOU CAN

Paul Chipperfield, aka Chippa, is a very well respected member of the Phillip Island community. At 23yrs he lost half his right leg below the knee in a boating accident. Don't think for a minute that stopped him in his tracks. He went on to living a full life with many great friends, eventually settling down on the island and buying his own house which he now shares with his loving and caring wife Jenny. Jenny works as a PCW at Grossards Aged Care Home and has also worked tirelessly raising money for cancer research, having lost too many close friends and family to this disease.

Sadly a few weeks ago Chippa had an accident whilst in his wheelchair and is now looking at months of rehab and at this stage there is no guarantee that he will ever walk again. As you can imagine, this has both Chippa and his wife Jenny feeling highly stressed and anxious. Paul Chipperfield was one of our local Vline drivers and is and has always been known as a bubbly, friendly, funny person who is always willing to help wherever he can. He is a big loveable teddy bear and very loyal. He also drove the bus for the kids who attend the Bass Coast Specialist School.

If you can spare any change or a couple of dollars to help Chippa and Jenny out, they are very humbled and grateful. All money goes directly to helping organize ramps and anything else that is needed for Chippa to be able to come home when the rehabilitation hospital says he is ready. It also goes to help cover general expenses like petrol when Jenny can visit Paul in Melbourne. There is a GoFundMe page at www.gofundme.com/f/small-helping-hand-for-paul which you can donate directly to, or you can donate at any one of 3 tins around town at IGA, The Corner Takeaway and Island Eats.

On behalf of all Paul and Jenny Chipperfield's family and friends, thank you for your help and beautiful soul.

Right size boots

Totally agree with my friends from Rip Curl Phillip Island Surf that boots need to feel good from the start. Not too big, not too small. If they hurt, ask for a size up. When you're in the shop, try doing pop up movements simulating your surf and see how they feel before you buy. Sometimes if they hurt it can cause poor concentration, reduced circulation or even leg cramps. Black nails and more. Try for at least 3 to 5 minutes before you buy.

All life matters

The sun is the same for everyone. One world, no black, no white, no yellow or red. Just people. The world is already complicated. Let's just be people and that's it.

Attention

Over the next few weeks please take extra care travelling to and from Phillip Island looking for waves. There are lots of road works with traffic delays on the main road. The roundabout construction is a good thing that will make life easier for locals and visitors.

World Ocean Day

This is an international day that takes place annually on June 8. The concept was originally introduced in 1992 by Canada's International Centre for Ocean Development and the Ocean Institute of Canada at the Earth Summit – UN Conference on Environment and Development in Rio de Janeiro, Brazil. Let's keep protecting the ocean so the ocean keeps looking after us too.

Good news

This week our partners @kanduiresort announced they will reopen Magic Island again keeping our dreams alive for our next surf camps possibly in November 2020. Good luck and a big hug to all our friends from there.

Happy international SURF DAY

Thank god surf day is every day. Magic, addictive, divine, royal, necessary and unique. Thanks to the SURF for bringing us together and making a difference in our lives. Let's keep the ocean clean and healthy so we can always have a wave to drop and feed our soul.

Surf simulator training

Every week from now on we have a small group for our Smoothstar 2 hr beginner, intermediate and advance surf simulator skate lesson. We will be running Sundays at 2 pm at the Newhaven skate park (close to the bridge). This will be a very special training session using a new vertical element to boost your surf game to the next level and help with exercises to connect upper and lower body. The next week we are fully booked but if you are interested please leave a message so we can invite you for our next one soon.

How to surf in the pandemic

It's time to go surfing, so are you ready to go? If you're not 100% sure that you're not sick, don't leave home and risk spreading it. Secondly, check your equipment. If it's all good head to the beach, check the conditions, make sure you're fit enough to go for it and try to find easy waves to start with. Remember that you lost a bit of ability so take it easy, preferably with a bigger board and with a bit more flotation than normal so you will paddle better and take the waves easier. Start slowly and build it up. Enjoy it and respect safe distancing, the numbers of people around you and using good sense. Now get out there, good luck and good waves.
